me. He always got drunk when he had money. She told me that whenever she gave him money to buy dust he got drunk with it.

Cross-examined - On the third occasion I have mentioned, the Prisoner's wife and I were having drink together in public house. His wife was about two years continuously in my service. She did not live always in my house when in my service. She would go home occasionally of a night to sleep. She had a room first in Bromley and afterwards in Haynes' house (N^o 4). For a time five months before marriage Prisoner slept in my kitchen even when I was at home.

By the Court - It was known that Ellen Elliot had money. It was once supposed that she had £600. It was spoken of. The Prisoner knew of it after he had been working with me a little. When he was drunk he was always talking about what he would do if he got money - that he would take
