knife. It was a few minutes after the crying began that I went up I had not gone to bed. They were both undressed. Lamp burning in room. I knew she had money. She told me. He was always on about it - he wanted her to sell her shares so that he should have the money. They remained in my house three weeks. I refused to keep them longer owing to his ill conduct and language. He used to push her and knock her about. It was always about money. I never saw him sober.

2. C. H. K. Wollaston, 2 Princes Street, London, E.C. I have seen Ellen Elliot. I am Secretary, Union Bank, London. Elliot had six shares of the Bank. They came to her through an Aunt in 1881. Actual price in 1888 was £40 per share. On 28th April 1888 she came to the Bank and told me she had got married and asked me to sell a share. I got it sold and she received
