

washed and proved to be dirt.
Some of bruises below jaw - Incised wound on nose from right to left. No smell of alcohol. Some partially digested food. Referred to passages read from 2 Taylor Medical Jurisprudence page seventy five.
Agrees with Taylor.

There was no blood on the feet of the corpse. They were very dirty.

Again referred to passages read from

2 Taylor page 67

2 Taylor page 44

2 Taylor page 61

I accept Taylor's views.

The blood on the Ulster was on left sleeve and back.

In homicidal strangulation hands of victim may be clenched or not.

Two of the wounds in front of abdomen were inflicted after death.

Rigor mortis present in head neck
and extremities.

After death skin loses elasticity

The edges of the wounds were not discoloured.